Over the years, users have made it known that the Photoshop functions and features are what they want to a part of their toolkit. There are a plethora of tools that are being used on a day to day basis, and with the new updates that are coming, these tools should continue to serve their purpose of bringing out the quality of your image. Up until now, users had had to double click to activate filters. Now, if you enable a filter (make sure to turn it on before you open a photo), then as you make changes to the photo, it has the ability to keep track of that. So, for instance, you can change the age of a person by playing with edges, sliders, or using a text or brush tool. It can tell you how you got there, or, if you want to retouch ancient Egyptian artifacts, it can show you how you would do it. You can tell it to remember where the edges are, or alter their color balance. Another feature that will be the highlight of Photoshop is the inclusion of the DPX file format. Photoshop will now handle files in this format, and handle them natively. Previously, you would have needed a third-party plug-in to create DPX files. The DPX file format is a common format for color correction and manipulation of multiple images in one file. As far as we know, it is the most user-friendly file format. Of course, we've still got a few patches that are being implemented on Elements to deal with prescription and color data. The last release for Photoshop Elements 2019 had Rx features, but the 2020 release will deal with the problems surrounding the color accuracy.

Adobe has also updated the Creative Cloud desktop version of Photoshop, too. Sources told MacRumors that Adobe added quite a bit of performance to the desktop application. And one big new feature is the addition of several GPU accelerated features, including increased performance drawing and compositing with render-on-demand, allowing users to create more productive with nearly a second of rendering time. Accelerating Adobe's commitment to its customers revolves around giving them more control on how they experience, store and share their creative projects. In early 2017 Adobe announced that the company would end-of-life legacy versions of InDesign and Flash. Adobe has invested in bringing these applications into the modern era, delivering cutting-edge industry cross-media standards with speed and performance, and with a renewed focus on accessibility and usability.
