New Episode of The Real Hajar Sewabati Telugu Episode Barha Barha (English: Barley) is a road-side tea stall on the side of the road in Kathmandu, Nepal. It has been an established place in the country's history for over hundred years. In fact, before the gate was built and the road was constructed, Barha was a tea garden - the first place of tea in Kathmandu. It has become a Kathmandu landmark. Barha Tea Garden Here is the story of the Barha tea garden and its owner, Ajay: It was 1974, and I was living in India. I was jobless at the time and was visiting a friend in Patna, India. The tea garden of my friend had closed down and the owner wanted to sell it off. As a retired government official myself, my friend gave me the job of finding a buyer for the tea garden. The garden was based in Hilsa, Bangladesh; however, the owner had visited Kathmandu, Nepal, for four months in the past and had found a bidder from Kathmandu. He visited me in Patna, and I found a buyer. As I had connections in Nepal, I had to call on them for the deal. On my first visit to Nepal, I arranged to meet one of the owners of the garden who now needed to find a buyer for the land and the garden. I asked him, "What about this, you know, road side Barha tea garden that I met in Nepal?" He replied, "Barha? Oh, that's just a small tea garden." "Nonsense, it's a big tea garden. "I had seen Barha and felt that was a good name for a tea garden. The owners looked at me in disbelief, "what in the world do you want with a road side tea garden?" I told him to wait and I would explain. A few days later, I returned to Patna, and told my friend about the agreement. I told him the owners said, "no." "Okay, then," I continued, "what should we do about the tea garden?" He replied, "You're never going to get a better deal than that. It's a good name for a tea garden." After a few days, I drove over to Kathmandu to meet the owners. They thought I had a buyer and had raised the
